Architects We Knew:
Detroit Designs for the Built Environment
Fall 2004 Lecture Series

World-renowned designers created the Motor City and the spaces where we live, work, and play. Yet this story seldom receives the attention it deserves. Detroit's architects created new engineering and style breakthroughs with lasting regional, national, and international impact. The Fall 2004 lecture series Architects We Knew: Detroit Designs for the Built Environment will tell this great story.

Presented in conjunction with the Detroit Historical Museum's new American Icons: Detroit Designs exhibit, the lecture series offers three special evenings featuring the following architectural luminaries:
